

OXC 2951

Copy 3 of 3

5 February 1962

Dear Richard:

The subject of range computers was discussed at some length during the recent ground school. At that time you expressed a desire to obtain a copy with the thought in mind of possibly producing a similar flight planning device for future operational uses with the A-12 aircraft.

Accordingly, a B-47 range computer is being forwarded herewith for format purposes. You will note that the outer scale is in reference to time, obviously distance could be substituted to provide a basis for fuel used. This type of computer has been used daily by SAC crews and is invaluable for detailed flight planning.
